

CITIZENS' WILLINGNESS TO JOIN CIVIC INITIATIVE IS MUCH HIGHER THAN THEIR ACTUAL ENGAGEMENT

In 2021, only 15% of citizens have joined an organized initiative for improving their place of residence or their country, i.e. the Republic of North Macedonia.

Men are more proactive compared to women, who less frequently reported participation in this type of civic engagement. At the same time, respondents with lower level of formal education are significantly less likely to join this type of civic engagement.

However, in spite of low utilization reported for these channels of civic engagement, the share of citizens that would join civic initiatives in the future is significantly higher and stands at 60%.